

Photographer hopes to attract UNO students Local models pose for lingerie enthusiasts

By Anne Johnson

and Anne Pritchard Walsh

LINGERIE LOVERS PANTY ART
Can't find the photos you want? Tired of the same old boring nudes? Do you like to look up skirts and down blouses? WE HAVE WHAT YOU WANT! Frilly SLIPS (full, half, can-can), BRAS (lacy and plain, padded & push-up), PANTIES (bikini, hip hugger, briefs — lacy and plain) sleek HOSE and garter belts, corsets. STRIP sequences, raised skirts, see-through blouses. $5 brings sample photo and brochure.

This advertisement has been running in a national men's magazine since last September, and, according to the Omaha man who placed the ad, response has been good.

Joe (not his real name) said 35 percent of the people who respond to the ad eventually order sets of photos.

He said he has a 100-name mailing list from all over the United States and customers include two local men.

A UNO graduate, Joe said he has advertised at UNO for women to pose as lingerie models.

To date, four students have responded to the ad, Joe said, and none have decided to model.

He singled out UNO "because there is a large number of attractive girls who are hurting for money."

UNO Chancellor Del Weber said he doesn't think there is a university policy covering this situation.

Joe said UNO was the only local college at which he advertised. Response from a five-week Thrifty Nickel ad was much better, he said. "The phone rang off the hook."

Of these callers, he found five women to model for him on a regular basis.

"I don't know why they do it," he said. "I think there is an attitude of exhibitionism in every woman."

Model selection

To screen prospective models, Joe said he first meets the women at a local coffee shop. "We look each other over on neutral territory," he explained.

Joe said he has "eclectic" tastes when choosing models. "I have never turned a gal away because she was unattractive."

He said he tells the women what they will be expected to do and if they are still interested, a test shooting is scheduled at his apartment.

About 80 percent of the models show up for the initial session, said Joe.

Although all photos feature some kind of lingerie, some are explicit and involve more nudity he said.

"I never make a model do anything she is uncomfortable doing."

"If a woman decides she doesn't want to do it after she gets here," he said, "I will send her home without a hassle."

Joe said he is a legitimate businessman and allows models to bring a chaperone to the photo sessions. "You can bring your own mother if you like," he said.

Most come unaccompanied, however. This is best, he said, because an audience inhibits both model and photographer.

All models must present a birth certificate to prove they are over 18 years of age, Joe said. The average age, he added, is 18-21. His most popular model is 27 years old, married and the mother of two children.

The best subjects, said Joe, are married or have steady boyfriends.

The women sign a release form which allows Joe to use their photos in any way he chooses. They do have the option of being "blackout" on the local market, he added, so that their photos will not be mailed to customers in the Employers find 'non-traditional' UNO students valuable

By Mickey Palmer

Nearly one-half of UNO's students can be defined as "non-traditional" and are considered a valuable resource for area employers, according to Ann Kelleher, UNO supervisor of part-time student employment services.

Kelleher defined non-traditional students as "individuals over the age of 25 who have been away from formal classes for at least three years."

"These students form an unusually attractive part-time labor pool, combining well-developed skills, experience and maturity to their productivity, reliability and identification with employers," said Kelleher.

Part-time employment has approximately 2,700 students listed with the service, but Kelleher said they could use more.

Kelleher emphasized that the services are free to both students and employers.

Of the 1,193 jobs listed during the last six months of 1982, part-time employment placed 955 students. Emphasis is placed on career-oriented jobs, and 262 students received career-related positions.

Part-time job descriptions can be found on bulletin boards in the Student Center and the Eppley Building. Job choices, both on and off campus, include: technical, labor, accounting, banking, office, retail, security, human services, recreation, food services and temporary employment.

Students interested in available jobs should write down the number found at the top of each description and either walk in to room 111 of the Eppley Building or call for an appointment to see a counselor. First-time visits require a registration form be filled out to keep on file for future reference.

The counselors advise the applicants on filling out job applications, preparation and proper dress for the interview. Students are then encouraged to follow up afterwards.

New to the staff this semester is veterans' counselor, Jim Hatcher.

"There were a few veterans who hesitated to use the service until they found out there was a veteran representative," Hatcher said. Hatcher worked for the Veterans Affairs Office (VAO) at UNO before coming to student employment.

In January, part-time employment sent 3,000 employers a premiere newsletter called SPTE's Speaks, encouraging employers to list available jobs through UNO and informing them of other employers using the service. The newsletter is published quarterly.

Some employers listed with the service include: Scarda Equipment, the World Herald, Sears and Roebuck Co., United Parcel Service (UPS) and Hy-Vee Food Stores.

Hy-Vee Food Stores hired between 30 and 40 UNO students with its opening in 1982, said Kelleher. UPS hired about 12 students for temporary Christmas positions in December.

Kelleher said students also find all of the Nebraska Job Service listings daily in Eppley 111 on microfiche.

Career Planning and Placement is sponsoring a Career Connection Workshop in the Student Center from 12:00 to 12:50 every Wednesday starting Feb. 9 and concluding March 16.

The 1982 Jobs Fair will be held April 7 in the Student Center.

Boyle: fund shortage limits parking options

By Anne Pritchard Walsh

"It's a real tragedy that UNO is the step-child of the (University of Nebraska) system," said Mayor Mike Boyle in an interview Feb. 14.

Boyle said it was unfortunate that every time UNO is talked about, parking is the major issue.

"UNO deserves more than that," he said. "The educational opportunities are as good if not better than at other universities, and at a reasonable price."

He said the recent Elmwood Park Task Force compromise, which will close two of the lower roads during the summer and eliminate 240 parking spaces, was a step in the right direction.

"It's the best thing going. It established a good relationship between the university and the city," Boyle said.

Though Boyle would not elaborate on solutions for the UNO parking problem, he said the city still has a goal to help the administration finance and build a high-rise parking structure.

He said the main problem concerning parking is the lack of money.

"The funding pressures are so great. It is foolish to give money for parking when teacher salaries are at stake," Boyle said.

He said the city and UNO administrators are discussing parking options, but, "I don't want to raise false hopes."

When asked about Legislative Resolution 5, which would give the Legislature power over university funds now controlled by the Board of Regents, Boyle said the regents should control the budget.

"The regents are elected and are accountable for funds. Voters do have a crack at them; they are in a position to know," he said. Boyle added that if the regents were not an elected board, he might feel differently.

Boyle said he decided to run for mayor because "things were drifting under Al (Veys). It's better to make a decision than none at all."

When he took office, Boyle said the city had a $500 million wish list, but could spend only $160 million. He made decisions to complete the most important projects, "so people can rely on things getting done."

He said the city has cut back on expenses, such as hiring freeze, resulting in savings of $1.4 million.

Boyle said that being mayor, "has a lot of demands, but it's part of the deal. I had one, complete full day off in July last year."

He said his constant routine of meetings doesn't allow him to spend very many evenings at home.

Though Boyle said his term has been rewarding so far, he wouldn't comment on any future political plans.

"It's too early to say . . . I'll just leave the doors open," he said.

area.

Strictly business

Most of the women are posing for the first time and are very nervous, Joe said. He admitted that he is also apprehensive when photographing them.

"I try to be honest, straightforward and cordial," he said. "I am all-business behind the camera."

There is never any intimate involvement with the women, Joe said. "I have a business to run and it would be too risky."

"I warn all models to tell their boyfriends or spouses what they are doing," he said. "I don't want anyone beating on my door with a shotgun."

A lot of people would not approve of his job, Joe said. "It's a crazy, crazy business."

Joe said it began when he decided to supplement his income from a part-time job last summer.

"I wanted to do something I enjoyed," he explained. He said he "knows his way around a camera, and has always liked looking at girls more than anything."

Joe said he has a "lingerie fetish" and figured that other men probably shared his interest. A fetish, he explained, is something which enhances erotic feelings.

"You can buy garden-variety nudes at any 7-11," he said, "but it is hard to find lingerie photos."

Joe said he decides what each model will wear. "I know what effect I want," he said. "I know how to make a woman look good."

Lingerie collection

He began collecting lingerie when he photographed his former girlfriend. Today, the collection occupies one bedroom of his house.

The room is painted hot pink. A pegboard hangs on one wall and holds at least 100 bras in all shapes, sizes and colors.

Half-slips, panties, hose and camisoles are piled on a table in the center of the room.

Skirts, shorts, nightgowns, robes and a Girl Scout uniform hang on a clothing rack against another wall. Shoes in all sizes and styles are lined up in rows underneath the rack.

Most of the clothes have been purchased at the Goodwill through the years, he explained.

Many of his requests are for custom-made photos, said Joe. "One man wrote requesting to 'see more feet.'"

"It's tough to please everyone," he added.

Since placing the national ad, Joe said he has invested $1,000 in photographic equipment and has converted his dining room into a studio.

A long curtain separates the living room from the dining room which contains a bed, a chair and a foot stool.

Joe explained that the room is given a "feminine look" by covering the furniture with a flowered bedspread.

At this time, Joe said he can only afford photo sessions once a week.

"I'm not getting rich," he said. "There are models to pay, wardrobe and equipment costs, postage and advertising costs, which eat away any profit."

Not everyone knows about his photography venture. He said he fears the vice squad might "hassle" him if they found out. His father knows, he said, but hasn't commented on how he feels about it.

Joe doesn't think his mother knows and said he is glad.

"I had a puritanical upbringing," he said. "I was always shy about sex."

"These days, I would rather be open and have fun with it."

Photographer's future

Eventually, Joe said he would like to sell a photo spread to a national men's magazine. However, he added, the magazines want hundreds of photos to choose from and it is very expensive. He plans to continue advertising for models and said he will probably look for women at UNO again.

He also plans to place an ad in a new magazine which he called "a potpourri of fetishes."

Joe said he suspects at least 50 percent of all Americans have some kind of fetish, and "there are probably a lot more who would never admit it."

Big Red ticket allocation under review

The allocation of UNL football tickets among the University System was the topic of discussion at the NU Board of Regents meeting Saturday.

The University of Nebraska Medical Center was represented by about 50 students lobbying for the right to retain a portion of tickets for Cornhusker games.

The Board of Regents showed no support for letting the Med Center buy 800 tickets.

UNL Chancellor Martin Massengale said he plans to review all tickets sold to university personnel who are not a direct part of UNL. The Med Center lost its share because students attend classes at a separate campus.

Massengale said he might consider giving the Med Center any available tickets on a temporary basis.

Acting Med Center Chancellor James Griesen said a lack of campus spirit is prevalent on his campus. Griesen said one thing that holds the campus together is the "time-honored tradition" of attending UNL football games.

Regent Robert Koefoot of Grand Island said he thought Massengale's decision was wrong, but added that he supports leaving the decision up to the chancellor.

Koefoot complained that Massengale didn't call him back when he wanted to discuss the issue. "I was ignored, and I'm damned mad," Koefoot said. Massengale said there was a misunderstanding in communication.

Feminist leaders say women's movement must redefine goals

By Karen Nelson

The women's movement may have to work more closely with peace and civil rights organizations to avoid remaining at a standstill, according to two veteran feminist leaders.

Kate Millett and Betty Friedan were the featured speakers at the second annual Women's Festival last Saturday at UNO. Attendance at the festival, sponsored by the Women's Resource Center and several other organizations, was estimated at 700 people.

Millett, the author of "Sexual Politics" and other books, said during a luncheon speech that the women's movement is now in a defensive posture. One sign of that posture was the recent defeat of the Equal Rights Amendment, she said.

"There are times that we (feminists) can go swinging along as we have been for 10 or 15 years, then you come up against a big wall marked 'they (society) won't let you,'" Millett said. Knowledge, technology, money and military power were all in male hands, she said.

Millett called the current economic situation an example of "government manipulation, government-made anxiety ... everybody is made to be scared.

"Think about unemployment. It's kind of a socially imposed death. 'What do I do? What do I achieve? Who am I?'"

Millett said that the current situation in the United States "sounds like a Marxist comic opera — we woke up to find a cowboy actor in charge of the empire, in charge of our destiny."

One problem, Millett said, is that few people protest because they think that everything is out of their hands. "Even students conform now," she said.

She said there needs to be a movement for social changes which will benefit all people and women should be part of it. Fights against racism, budget cuts and nuclear weapons should be part of this movement, according to Millett.

Friedan, author of "The Feminine Mystique" and "The Second Stage," and one of the founders of the National Organization for Women, was the keynote speaker Saturday evening.

She said the audience was a sign that the second stage of feminism had arrived.

"This doesn't mean that we won the agenda of the first stage," Friedan said. "It means we broke through and changed women's consciousness." Women no longer only think of themselves as wives and mothers, but as people, she said.

Women discovered that they had political power because of the fight for the ERA, Friedan said. "When that time ran out June 30, 1982, I thought I'd be in such despair. I followed the polls, and the majority wanted ERA even as the country was seeming to get more conservative on other issues. How could the legislators ignore it?"

"But we know who didn't want ERA. There were a lot of very powerful forces with a lot of money. Not just men against women, but some powerful men who had disgusting women like Phyllis Schlafly to do their dirty work."

Friedan predicted that the Equal Rights Amendment would pass by the end of the decade.

Many people, according to Friedan, are ready for the second stage of feminism. Part of this second stage includes a redefinition of the family.

"The family is not a mother, a father and two kids under 6 years old," she said. The growing number of families with only one parent or both parents working outside the home will make issues such as day care and paternity leaves more important in the future, she said.

"Even those who remain in the role of the traditional housewife have a new sense of value because they choose to stay in that role. It would be a crime to hand her over to the right wing."

Friedan said that women can best make their concerns known by voting, avoiding single issue politics and joining in coalitions with other political groups.

Liberation for women also means liberation for men, Friedan said. "The women's movement is also an awful lot of men. We don't have to make men the enemy."

Roskens' hiccup cure: trip to Fantasy Island

Imagine going to the Caribbean. Imagine visiting Japan, the Oregon coast and Colorado ski slopes. Imagine being Ronald Roskens, University of Nebraska president.

Roskens and his wife will visit all these locations, and possibly more, during his seven-week administrative leave. His vacation was to have begun after the Board of Regents meeting last Saturday, so presumably he's now either surfing or skiing.

The regents gave Roskens the time off so that he and the missus could take "the time to renew their vigor and spirits for the tasks which lie ahead," and "for reflection, for reading and for relaxed concentration."

Another reason for granting the leave, said some regents, was Roskens' week-long battle with hiccups in November. According to the World Herald, Roskens said he has had no health problems since then.

Which works out great. After all, it's not very much fun vacationing when you're sick. Just imagine trying to drink Singapore Slings in Japan during a fierce hiccup-attack.

Roskens will receive his regular pay during the vacation, and the leave does not count on his regular four-week annual vacation. Imagine, almost three months of paid vacation, via the good old Nebraska taxpayers and students.

Also according to the World Herald, Roskens said he will pay all the expenses of his trip. Which trip? Or did he mean all of his trips? Since the Japanese government invited Roskens to visit, are they paying for some of it? If he does visit some universities, will it be written off as a business expense? Are we back to the Nebraska taxpayers?

It seems slightly ironic that in the midst of negotiations with the Legislature for more university funds, the university's president is or will be sunning himself on a beach somewhere in the Caribbean.

Oh, well. Since the Huskers don't play in Hawaii anymore, perhaps Roskens can work out some kind of a deal with the University of Bahama's football team. Imagine that.

Socio-economic ladder deprives blacks

Byndon served two years in the Peace Corps, 1977 to 1979, in the Republic of Botswana. He traveled throughout South Africa and observed the educational system. Byndon holds a masters degree in Urban Education from UNO. His column will run every Wednesday during Black History Month.

By A'Jamal-Rashad Byndon

*The struggle continues,
What I fail to correct today
My son will have to correct
Tomorrow*

"A'Jamal"

In America's society, education for blacks has been impeded by various conditions, and attitudes. The school of thought that comes to mind is that the genetic factors are significant variables which impact on the poor performance of blacks.

What many blacks don't understand is that in a 'closed' system, it generally takes a certain level of income in order to move up the economic ladder. Poor people are not able to attend the special Montessori schools of the elites.

In the United States, one of the filtering processes to keep blacks out of some of the better quality institutions is to make the cost prohibitive. Many blacks are from the lower-economic class, thereby, they can't afford to pay the high tuition and/or transportation.

We only need to look at many of the winners of the national scholarships in this country. The scholarships are based mainly on test scores and grades.

If blacks perform poorly on those tests, then scholarships are not available for them. Sometimes, regardless of the student grade-point-average, test scores are usually more important in determining the 'winners'.

White people are always the winners in both South Africa and America. One of the big events in the education of blacks was the legal case of Brown v. Board of Education in Kansas during the 1950s.

Many blacks are not aware that a couple of black psychologists provided a social science study on dolls which helped their side to win the case.

Kenneth and Mamie Clark cited an experiment they conducted, in which a group of black children preferred 'white dolls' over 'black dolls'.

The Clarks concluded that segregation inflicts "psychological harm" (Hodgson 1973). The Clarks made the plea to the Supreme Court to allow black children to attend white schools so that they will see whites as humans and not superior beings.

In short, after attending those schools, black children wouldn't have a fixation for 'white dolls'. It is my contention black children still want 'white dolls' because of this subliminal brainwashing which takes place through the mass media, and in the elementary schools.

When some of those black children grow up, they want to be white women or men, because of the strong urge to be 'white' in America. Some blacks are caricatures of whites.

We need to ask ourselves, are the blacks in Africa inflicted with "psychological harm" by attending an all-black school? I would think not! In fact the Clarks' premise was weak and the Supreme Court was caught in the emotions of those times.

Had someone attempted to sell them a broken-down used car, I am sure they would have started bidding on it. They manipulated the system to sustain a welfare network of bureaucrats who are supposed to provide services to the low-social economic students. The only concern is their perpetuation as professional 'educational bloodsuckers'.

William Raspberry, a national columnist from the Washington Post, said the problem blacks face goes beyond racism and economics. He said black babies born out of wedlock, illegal immigrants and refugees, and lack of seniority in jobs are the reasons for permanent underclass in black population. Blacks will always lack seniority in America.

Some blacks have short memories. The residue of yesterday precludes the action of today. We can't talk about future democracy in South Africa until the whites in South Africa are forced to get off all that land when the Africans are still in a captive situation.

This same situation applies to blacks in America. Historically speaking, whites acquired over billions of acres of land via the Homestead Act of 1862, and other give-away programs. In our educational system we are forced to develop "collective amnesia" about the effects of slavery and oppression.

— "As long as that child is living at home, they should abide by the rules of that home."

— "This regulation deals with prescriptions, not information or over the counter birth-control devices."

— "This regulation will not stop teenagers from having sex, in fact, probably nothing will stop kids from having sex, but will only increase teenage pregnancies, abortions, unwed mothers, and unwanted children. It is also a violation of the teenagers' constitutional rights. It is also unconstitutional because it applies only to females."

— "Teenagers wouldn't go seek these family-planning services if they had to have their parents informed. If the family is an open one, it would be an ideal situation."

— "The number of unwanted pregnancies would rise, leading to more abortions."

— "If teens who engage in sexual activity show some intelligence in requesting birth control, there should be no hindrances to such an intelligent decision."

— "I agree that pregnancy would rise among teenage girls if this law was enforced and I believe it is an invasion of privacy."

— "I do feel the judge is right about indirect pregnancy. Parents would not want their children on birth control under age 17 but they would rather not have them pregnant."

— "Parent should not look to the government to keep tabs on their children's activities involving their personal health and sexual activity. It seems that such a personal matter should be beyond the petty tattle-tale-like restrictions of these overly zealous people. Power of the Pill."

— "I don't think it should be enforced because I know a lot of girls' parents would either have a heart-attack and die or never let the girl out of the house again if they found out."

— "I also believe parents have the right to know at least until the girl is of legal age. The parent should feel lucky that their child was concerned about birth control, and they wanted advice — as to take any risks and get pregnant."

— "As a parent, I would want to know that my daughter is sexually active and I would want to share that decision with her and also as to whether she should use birth control-devices."

— "Sex education is sadly lacking if a girl or boy can't talk to their parents about sex. With sexual disease near epidemic levels, communication between the parents and children should be initiated if the children are curious about sex."

The UNO Mavericks are still in the race for the North Central Conference Championship.

When the Maverick basketball team lost to Morningside 71-65 in Sioux City, Iowa, Friday night, it looked as if the Mavs were out of the conference race.

But while the Mavs edged past South Dakota 83-75 in Vermillion Saturday, 35 miles down the road in Sioux City, Northern Colorado, now 5-10 in the conference, upset Morningside 87-79.

Hanson believes the conference championship won't be decided until March 5 when conference play ends.

"We've got three tough ball games left," said Maverick head coach Bob Hanson. "I told my players that we've got to take them one at a time."

The Mavs play North Dakota and North Dakota State Friday and Saturday at the UNO Fieldhouse, and Northern Colorado in Greeley on March 5.

Morningside and North Dakota State both have four games left in conference action. Morningside will play two at home and two on the road and all four of North Dakota State's games are on the road.

"Morningside played pretty good defense on us," said Hanson. "The reason we didn't have the balance is because we weren't running our offense very well."

Hanson said Morningside was able to run on the Mavs and score easy baskets.

"I thought our players showed a lot of poise and togetherness," said Hanson of the South Dakota game. "I knew it was going to be a real tough ball game. They've played it tough up here."

The Coyotes, 11-13 and 3-11 in conference play, have only lost two games this year at home in the Dakota Dome.

"They showed a lot of spark tonight and had a lot of spunk just staying with us," said Hanson. "They're a very aggressive team."

Mav center Terry Sodawasser had a game-high 22 points. The 6-9 sophomore hit eight of 13 from the field and six of 12 from the free throw line. Sodawasser also grabbed a game-high 11 rebounds.

Sodawasser got into foul trouble late in the first half. However, one of Sodawasser's first half fouls was mistakenly credited to Mav forward Jeff Fichtel who fouled out with 9:28 remaining. After the game the official scorer admitted to the error.

Sodawasser collected what should've been his fifth foul with 2:58 left, but went on to score four more points.

Sophomore Dan Rust, a 6-10 center, helped the Mavs when Fichtel and Sodawasser got into foul trouble. Rust made three of five from the field and four of six free throws for 10 points in only 13 minutes.

"I thought Danny played real well. He made some key free throws," said Hanson.

But South Dakota had their own foul trouble. Three Coyote players fouled out, including starting 6-6 forward Dale Leibfried, and three other South Dakota players had four fouls.

Hanson said Mavs Rust, Tony Cunningham, Dean Thompson and Dave Felici were instrumental in the win.

"We got some great help off the bench particularly in Tony Cunningham and Dan Rust," said Hanson.

"Dean played much better than he did last night," said Hanson. Junior guard Thompson scored 20 points against South Dakota compared to seven against Morningside.

"Felici played a smart game," said Hanson. "I thought he did a very good job on Don

Track team shatters records

The UNO Lady Mav track team scored 43 points Saturday to win the quadrangular indoor meet at the UNO Fieldhouse. South Dakota State finished second with 39 points, Central Missouri State placed third with 36 and Northwest Missouri followed with 13.

"We couldn't be happier," Coach Bob Condon said of the win. "We haven't been beat at home indoors for a long time."

Two freshmen Lady Mav runners broke UNO indoor track records. "They were running in the toughest events of the meet," said Condon. "South Dakota has just mobbed people in the distance events for the last few years, but they won't anymore."

Distance runner Linda Elsasser, from Millard North, clocked a winning 4:44.5 in the 1500-meter run, breaking the indoor record of 4:49.5 she set earlier this year.

Elsasser's time of 3:05.69 in the 1000-meter run wiped away a 1981 record time of 3:08.1 set by Candace Moats. Elsasser, however, finished second in the 1000-meter run behind South Dakota's Laura Geason with 3:04.67.

Cheryl Fonley, from Dubuque, Iowa, placed first in the 3000-meter run with 10:09.12 and improved her previous record-setting time of 10:23.3 that she made earlier this year.

Other first-place finishes came in the high jump, the 55-meter dash and the 300-meter dash. Senior Beth Kerschinske cleared 5'6" in the high jump, freshman Jodi Price clocked 7.40 in the 55-meter dash and sophomore Becky Wilson ran 42.26 in the 300-meter dash.

Wilson also placed second in the long jump with 16'11 1/4" behind Sandy Margis of Northwest Missouri with 17'6 3/4" and third in the 400-meter dash with a time of 1:01.3. Northwest Missouri's Pat Achterhoff finished first with 1:00.23 and Central Missouri's Jackie Neville finished second with 1:00.80.

Condon and assistant track coach Shawn Johnson named

Wilson Lady Mav of the Week for her solid performance in the meet.

UNO freshman Sue McDonald placed third in the 55-meter hurdles with 9.27. Central Missouri State hurdlers Angela Horned and Belinda Hayden came in first and second, respectively, with times of 8.39 and 8.51.

Laurie Hajek gave the Lady Mavs another third-place finish. The freshman's time of 2:30.12 in the 800-meter run trailed the times of South Dakota State's Tammi Wermers with 2:23.45 and Audrey Stavrum with 2:27.31.

UNO placed second in the 4x400 relay with 4:15.19 behind South Dakota State's first place time of 4:12.93 and third in the 4x1 lap relay with 1:27.92. Central Missouri won the event with 1:26.45 and South Dakota State finished second with 1:27.54.

The Lady Mav track team travels to Vermillion, S.D., Friday and Saturday for the North Central Conference Indoor Track Championships.

Men's track team dashes to dual win

UNO runners swept the 300-meter dash Saturday at the UNO Fieldhouse in a 71-60 win over Central Missouri State.

Mike Wellington placed first with 37.29, Lawrence Allen was second with 37.70 and Darnell Hornsby third with 38.48.

Allen and Wellington placed second and third in the 55-meter dash with 6.54 and 6.57, respectively, while Central Missouri's Jim Rader won the event with a time of 6.47.

Freshman Brad Cleaveland clocked a winning time of 1:08.57 in the 500-meter dash and UNO's Bill Drake followed Cleaveland to the finish line with 1:08.86.

A time of 50.47 by Mav Al McLaughlin won him top honors in the 400-meter dash. Central Missouri's Arnold Hammond finished second with 51.47 and UNO's Todd Polson came in third with 51.72.

Tim Freeburg gave the Mavs another first-place win with 7.57 in the 55-meter high hurdles. Central Missouri's Darwin Featherston followed with 7.63 and UNO's Jay Conyers finished third with 7.72.

Mike Jones clocked 2:04.43 and Dave Nielson 2:07.92 in the 1000-meter run to give UNO first and second place in the event. Jones, Freeburg, Cleaveland and McLaughlin's time of 3:26.32 won the 4x400 relay over the visiting team who clocked 3:41.75.

Pole vaulter Tracy Slobodnik cleared 15'6" to finish on top in the event. Central Missouri's Tony Lightfoot and Jim Rader cleared 15' and 14' for second and third place, respectively.

In the high jump, UNO's Rick Hollendieck jumped 6'6" while Conyers and Central Missouri's Dave Brandon tied for second with 6'2" jumps.

Central Missouri's Danny Holland leaped 22'2 1/4" to win the long jump. Finishing second and third, Mavs Cleaveland and Hollendieck scored 21'9 3/4" and 20'5 3/4", respectively.

Central Missouri also won the triple jump with 45'5 1/2". UNO's Carlos Rodgers placed second with 44'10" and Hollendieck was third with 43'1 1/2".

Jeff Hodges gave UNO a second place finish in the 800-meter run with a time of 2:03.80 behind Central Missouri's Robbie Dudley's 2:03.67. Vince Baldwin gave the Mavs a third place finish in the 1500-meter run clocking 4:15.17.

The track team travels to Vermillion, S.D., Friday and Saturday for the North Central Conference Indoor Track Championships.

Eight Mav wrestlers qualify for nationals

By Ken Kreiker

The UNO wrestling team again fell short of winning the North Central Conference tournament championship. For the second straight year they lost to North Dakota State.

The second-place Mavericks lost 99-84, despite qualifying eight wrestlers for the national tournament, the eight included four conference champions, the most ever posted by a Maverick team.

UNO started the double-elimination tournament by winning eight of their 10 first-round matches. Mark Manning, Rick Heckendorn and Mark Rigatuso won.

Manning dominated North Dakota's Jared Anderson, 30-4 in the 150-pound division. Northern Colorado's Jay Hundle was pinned by Heckendorn at 177 pounds and heavy-weight Rigatuso was equally impressive with a 20-4 decision over Matt Wychor of Mankato State.

Mike Smith and Curt Ramsey were the only Mavs to lose in the opening round.

Ramsey and Smith finished fifth and sixth, respectively, in the tournament. Ramsey defeated Mankato's Bob Phillips, 9-8, and Augustana's John Groskreutz decided Smith in a close match, 4-2. Ramsey had a 2-2 record for the tournament, while Smith posted a 1-2 record.

In the semi-final round of action, eight Maverick wrestlers battled for a chance to become a conference champion. Six Mavs advanced with Manning, Heckendorn, Greg Wilcox and Rigatuso posting wins.

Manning handed Anderson his second defeat with a 17-2 decision in the 150-pound class. Heckendorn remained unbeaten by defeating Augustana's John Regan 10-3.

Wilcox, in the 190-pound division, won by decisioning Augustana's Mark Young 6-4. Young finished third in last year's nationals. He also received an award at that tournament for recording the most pins.

In the heavyweight division, Rigatuso posted a 15-4 decision over Jim Fryer of South Dakota State.

In other semi-final matches, UNO's Mark Weston advanced to the finals with a 6-5 victory over Scott Knowlen of North Dakota.

Jim Kimsey also won a chance to wrestle in the finals by defeating John Morgan of North Dakota State 11-9. Kimsey wrestled the tournament at less than 100 percent after suffering a knee injury against South Dakota State in the Mavs' final dual meet.

Maverick senior Phil Pisasale was defeated in the semi-finals by Augustana's Kraig Pressler, 7-4, in the 126-pound division. Pisasale defeated Pressler a week earlier 15-9.

UNO's Bob Hoffman also fell victim to an Augustana wrestler at 134 pounds. Nick Karantinos defeated Hoffman 5-2 in a closely fought match.

Coach Mike Denney called Pisasale's and Hoffman's losses the turning point of the meet.

In the championship round, four of the six Maverick qualifiers became NCC champions. Manning, Heckendorn, Wilcox and Rigatuso won.

At 150 pounds, Manning decided Augustana's Dave Wiklund 16-5. Denney said Manning had dominated his weight division throughout the tournament.

Heckendorn won a thriller over Steve Hammers, 5-3, in the 177-pound class. Heckendorn was tied with Hammers entering the final minute of the last round, when he took Hammers down with 15 seconds left to win the title.

Wilcox pulled off another win by defeating Dave Haas 6-5 at 190 pounds. Haas was the returning conference champion and finished second in the national tournament last year.

Rigatuso also gained a bit of revenge by decisioning North Dakota's Jerome Larson 7-3. Larson drew with Rigatuso 6-6 at UNO's triple dual meet. Rigatuso's win gave him his second consecutive NCC championship. Larson finished third in the nation last year.

UNO's Weston had a tough time, however, losing to North Dakota State's Steve Werner, in the 118-pound division. Werner decided Weston 9-2. Kimsey also lost to South Dakota State's Dave Cornemann 4-3. Kimsey beat Cornemann last week 12-8.

Denney said he is looking forward to the nationals which will be held at Fargo, N.D., Feb. 27-28.

"We have eight wrestlers that I'm not afraid to put up against anyone," he said. "There are four teams who can win it; Cal. State-Bakersfield, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, North Dakota State and us.

"This tournament will be the closest the NCAA Division II has had in a long time."

Mavs look to 'tough' games

Warren." Felici held Warren to 20 points. South Dakota's 6-2 Ron Swanhorst also scored 20 against the Mavs.

The Mav full-court press forced 27 turnovers of the Coyotes, but UNO committed 25 of their own.

Morningside 71, UNO 65

"They were the better team tonight, but it will be interesting when they come up to our place," said Morningside College coach Dan Callahan after a 71-62 loss at UNO on Feb. 4.

The Mavs traveled to Morningside last Friday night and were defeated by the Chiefs 71-65.

Trailing by as many as 16 points in the first half, the Mavs fought back. Baskets by Sodawasser and Dwayne King just before intermission cut the Morningside lead to 12 points.

After halftime, UNO continued to doggedly pull themselves back into the game paced by senior guard Felici. Felici, who scored 16 points, all in the second half, tied the game for the first time since the early going when he hit both ends of a one and one with 10:38 to play.

Although they were able to knot the score three more times and grab a short-lived two-point lead, UNO didn't have enough left after their uphill battle to turn the corner on Morningside.

"After we got the lead, we just weren't patient enough on offense. If we'd played defense better early in the game or shot free throws better in the first half, it could have been a different game," said Hanson.

The Mavs' shooting contributed to their defeat. UNO shot only 41 percent from the floor and made only five of 13 free throws in the first half. Morningside built their lead behind the shooting of 6'8" senior David Krantz, who hit on seven of eight shots in the first half.

Evidence of UNO's poor shooting was illustrated by Thompson, who managed just one field goal in seven attempts. He knocked in five of six free throws to finish with seven points on the night.

The Mavs outrebounded Morningside 44-36 and committed fewer turnovers, 16-21.

King and Sodawasser joined Felici in double figures with 13 and 15 points, respectively. Hanson also had praise for King's defensive play. "King did a great job on defense again, he held Beneke to just two points," said Hanson. Morningside's Bob Beneke normally averages 14 points per game.

Sodawasser kept UNO in the game early scoring 13 of his points in the first half. The 6-9 center also led all rebounders with nine for the game.

The loss left UNO two games behind the Chiefs in the conference race but Hanson didn't let circumstance belittle his team's comeback bid. "I'm proud as hell with the way the team came back tonight," he said. "But we didn't take care of the ball the way we should down the stretch," he said.

UNO returns Friday and Saturday nights for their final home games, against North Dakota and North Dakota State. The games will start at 8 p.m. following the Lady Mavs.

Women tied for lead after loss to Coyotes

Poor shooting by the Lady Mav basketball team in the second half resulted in a 66-58 loss to South Dakota in Vermillion, S.D., Saturday night.

Both UNO and South Dakota are 5-3 in the North Central Conference and tied for first place. The Lady Mavs are 13-11 overall and the Coyotes are 16-8.

Last week the Lady Mavs took over the conference lead with two road wins over South Dakota State, 59-43, and Augustana 59-54. The Coyotes, however, had been idle since Feb. 5, when UNO defeated them 55-54 in the UNO Fieldhouse.

Senior Mary Henke Anderson led the Lady Mavs in scoring with 12 points and senior Lisa Linthacum added 10.

South Dakota's 5-9 forward Karrie Wallen scored a game-high 21 points for the Coyotes and 5-10 guard Ann Pancoast and 6-3 center Pam Olerich added 18 and 15, respectively.

The Lady Mavs trailed 37-26 at halftime, but rallied for the first eight points after intermission to pull within 37-36. South Dakota then scored six straight points and managed to keep at least a four-point lead over the Lady Mavs.

The Lady Mavs meet North Dakota and North Dakota State Friday and Saturday nights at 5:45 p.m. at the UNO Fieldhouse.
